

"I'm not recruiting right now"

No problem! There are other ways you, as an employer, can help the IASE promote equal employment opportunities for people with disabilities...

You can:

Take part in Job Shadow Day

Job Shadow Day is an annual national day when people with disabilities shadow an employee as they go about their normal working routine. Every year hundreds of employers and people with disabilities from across Ireland take part.

Work experience or placement

Why not offer a jobseeker with a disability a work experience opportunity or placement? A short-term placement like this could help a jobseeker get a job in the future. You could also help by giving a jobseeker some support and training to develop their interview skills.

Contact the IASE for more information on the many ways you can help to promote diversity at work using supported employment.

Become a member of the IASE

It's easy to join and express your support and commitment for equal employment opportunities for people with disabilities. Membership is open to all employers, of all sizes, across all sectors.

Get to know your local service

Even if you're not recruiting right now, you can get to know your local supported employment service. You may be able to work with them in the future.

Guidance and support

If one of your staff members acquires a disability, your local supported employment agency can help with guidance and support to retain your employee.
